Courtney Harler (she/her) is a freelance writer, editor, and educator based in Las Vegas, Nevada. She founded Harler Literary LLC in 2020. Previously, she tutored, mentored, and instructed for the College of Southern Nevada. Current professional clients and affiliations include The Masters Review in Oregon, Funicular Magazine in Canada, Project Write Now in New Jersey, and Tulsa Glitterary Conference in Oklahoma. Courtney also serves as co-host of PWN's Debut Review, a weekly podcast devoted to debut art and its creators.

As a writer, Courtney believes in an intuitive writing process that can be honed by daily dedication to the craft. As a writing instructor, she believes in every writer's full ownership of their voice on the page and that every writer has a unique story to tell. In her editorial work, Courtney strives to honor each writer's sense of purpose and style for the specific manuscript at hand.

In recent years, for her own written work, Courtney has been honored by fellowships and grants from Writing By Writers, Community of Writers, Napa Valley Writers' Conference, and Nevada Arts Council. Her work has received three Pushcart Prize Nominations. Her stories, poems, essays, interviews, and reviews have been featured around the world, and direct links to her publications and related awards can be found at <https://harlerliterary.llc>.

Courtney holds an MFA in Creative Writing (Fiction) from Sierra Nevada University and an MA in English (Literature) from Eastern Washington University.
