Gina Cifonelli lives for art. It is her soul's purpose to create and express herself through the visual arts. She loves to share that with people and teach them how to dive deep within and express themselves. She was a middle and high school art teacher for 7 years in Clark County. She enjoyed teaching and exposing her students to projects outside of the classroom. She left teaching to pursue her art more deeply and personally, as well as to learn the art of tattooing. Cifonelli has focused on large abstract paintings for the last few years and now she is diving back into illustration. She is dedicated to the creation of art, and feels everyone can do it with time, focus and fun. She states, "I do not believe in they were born with it, no, I believe in they earned it, they put time and energy into it, which proves that everyone can create art and feel the joy of the creative process!"

Cifonelli received her bachelor's degree in arts education from California State University Long Branch. She started chapters of the National Arts Society at the schools she taught at and worked in arts integration, collaborating with her fellow teachers. She is a past board member of City of the World Art Gallery, Las Vegas.
